CARE TAKES ALL OF US.

Care Takes All of Us highlights the central role Maryland hospitals play in the care of Marylanders. These remarkable institutions and the people who work there are truly the "heart" of the health care delivery system that brings care to communities. Under the state's unique all-payer model, hospitals align quality, access, and affordability across the health care landscape. No other entity in the care delivery system is responsible for the fiscal savings required in the model, often putting financial and operational strain on the hospitals and health care system. The convening role hospitals play in Maryland's health care system is embedded in how care is organized, financed, coordinated, and governed.
